Schoolchildren formed the second-largest 'bike bus' in the world, with 873 pupils, teachers and parents taking part in Bike Around the Borough on 18 June

NEARLY 900 children, parents and teachers took part in this year's Bike Around the Borough, just missing out on the world

record for the number of people in a continuous line of bicycles, or 'bike bus'. The ride on 18 June provided a chance for pupils to practise skills learned at cycle training, and to raise awareness of how easy it is to travel around the borough by bike. It saw young cyclists from more than a third of the borough's primary schools complete a nine-mile circuit of Hackney. Rebecca Fouhy, nine, from Queensbridge Primary, E8, said: "I like cycling because it makes me feel free and it makes me feel happy." For more info and pics, see pages 8-9.

A cut above the rest

HACKNEY students went to BAFTA headquarters on 1 July, bringing home awards in two categories in the national Cut Films competition.

The annual anti-tobacco and anti-smoking project, Cut Films, encourages young people to make short films to persuade their friends and family not to smoke.

Professional filmmakers support teachers, youth workers and young people by taking them through the film production process from script to screen.

Film director Danny Boyle presented the awards with St John of Jerusalem Primary School coming second in the under-11 category, with their film 'ASH Anti-Smoking Heroes'.

“It's important not to smoke because really you're just cutting down your life”

Teacher Luma Abdulla said: “It was an absolute honour to be awarded with second place at the nationals. The children felt very pleased with themselves and we as a school are extremely proud of them and their tremendous efforts. Well done girls.”

In the 20-25 age group, Hackney youth-media organisation Mouth That Roars came third.

Camilla, 20, who represented the group, said: “It's important not to smoke because really you're just cutting down your life. We're here on earth to live life so what's the point of cutting it down?”

The national Cut Films awards followed Hackney's own, borough-wide competition, funded by the Council.

Over 1,100 young people entered, with an audience of 300 attending the Hackney Cut Film awards on 29 June, at the Rio Cinema, presented by Sky1 presenter Jacqueline Shepherd.

The awards celebrated the best films made in the borough, with the top 15 films shown, out of a total 134 submitted.

The overall judge's choice winner was Dempsey Miah, a student from Hackney Community College, with his film 'Smoker'. Hackney New School was named the overall popular choice for their contribution 'You Are Your Own Monster'.

Former US President, Bill Clinton, visits Haggerston School to meet City Year volunteers. He receives a t-shirt for his granddaughter, Charlotte

Good day Mr President

THE Oval Office, the United Nations and Haggerston School: former American President, Bill Clinton, added another notch to his belt of venerable institutions when he visited the Hackney school.

One of the most famous men in the world made his appearance on 25 June as part of the fifth anniversary celebrations of City Year UK. The charity recruits 18 to 25-year-olds as volunteers to mentor in schools in deprived areas.

Originally founded in Hackney, the charity now

“Every child you volunteer with can be empowered to live a different tomorrow by you” operates in 27 cities across three continents.

Sophie Livingstone, Chief Executive of City Year UK, said: “Since 2010, when we launched here in Hackney with just 58 young volunteers, we’ve grown to 500 volunteers who have given 800,000 hours, reaching 40,000 pupils.”

President Clinton met with a group of volunteers, or ‘corps members’ before giving a speech.

He said: “Every child you volunteer with can be empowered to live a different tomorrow by you. The answer to tomorrow is unity in diversity. I hope this is something that will grow and grow and grow.”

Dr Jane Keeley, headteacher at Haggerston School, added: “Corps

members support the whole school, but they also make a profound difference to the daily life of individual pupils.

“That might be by supporting a child with little or no English one-to-one, helping a pupil improve their behaviour, or building confidence through one of the many extra-curricular activities they run.”

Hackney Matters panel members took part in a discussion about the challenges facing the borough as part of the 'Hackney A Place For Everyone?' campaign; Claudia Draper (circle) and Play Streets (inset below)

Changing face of Hackney

Residents took part in a debate about the challenges facing the borough

MORE than 100 residents took part in a discussion with Council representatives about how the community can tackle the challenges facing the borough.

The event, in Hackney Town Hall on 18 June, was an opportunity for members of Hackney Matters – an online citizens' panel, which provides the Council with feedback via surveys – to discuss issues with councillors and officers in person.

It was part of the 'Hackney A Place For Everyone?' campaign, which aims to gather the views of thousands of residents about changes in the borough and help the Council understand the impact they're having on people who live here.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, opened the event and thanked the audience for the time they give as members of the e-panel. He outlined the challenges facing Hackney, which he described as 'rapid social and economic change, coupled with deep funding cuts' and talked about the greater role for individuals and communities in helping to meet those challenges.

Claudia Draper, of Hackney Play Association, talked about the Play Streets scheme as an example of how residents can work with the Council to make a difference in the community.

Three years ago she contacted Hackney about a scheme to allow people to temporarily close their road so children can play out. She said: "Amazingly it didn't take long to make it happen. The key thing is, it's about residents consulting with neighbours; it's not a top down process."

“The key thing is, it's about residents consulting with neighbours; it's not a top down process”

There are now 40 play streets across the borough, coordinated by volunteers. Claudia said people of all ages and backgrounds look forward to the events as an opportunity to get to know their neighbours.

Participants were split into groups for roundtable discussions. They talked about the positive and negative changes they had seen over the last decade.

Saskia Donald, said: "It was really good to get different parts of the borough talking about issues that are shared across Hackney. It was also good to get our opinions heard in a personal way."

Perceived positives included cleaner streets, better transport, improved schools, better quality shops and entertainment, and a busy digital and tech sector.

Negatives covered a lack of affordable housing, high demand for school places, rising inequality, and the impact of busy nightlife in some areas.

The groups then discussed what could be done to keep Hackney as a place for all residents, especially when there is less public money to go around.

One suggestion was to enable volunteers to assist with services under financial pressure. Another was to give residents access to public spaces, like community centres and parks, to improve community cohesion. Many people were especially keen for more public events to bring people from different backgrounds together.

The seeds of change

 By Hattie Worsley

IN a pretty, verdant vegetable garden, a vicar is scooping homemade pesto onto a freshly picked runner bean. The man with whom he is deep in conversation pauses to nibble thoughtfully on an edible flower.

There is tea, sunshine, peace and camaraderie. There are also mental health problems, homelessness and addiction. Because this is the Evering Road Kitchen Garden, a unique vegetable and herb garden run by North London Action for the Homeless (NLAH) in the grounds of St Paul's Church, Stoke Newington.

The garden, a finalist in this year's Gardening Against the Odds Awards, has its roots in the soup kitchen that NLAH operates from St Paul's church hall. Twice a week, this kitchen provides a meal for up to 100 homeless and vulnerable people.

Most of the volunteers tending to this Eden of peas, tomatoes, squash and kale are also users of the soup kitchen. The produce they grow is ploughed back into the meals they eat.

Lucie Galand, the soup kitchen's cook, explains: "In season, the garden provides for about half the soup we serve, and every meal contains herbs grown here."

The majority of the people who use the kitchen have mental health or addiction issues. About a third are rough sleepers, and many have unstable accommodation.

Lucie says: "They could be expelled from a hostel, or benefits don't come through on time. There's a sense of fragility and precariousness to their lives."

“Users are responsible for contributing to something useful and beautiful, something they can feel proud of”

Once finding their way to the soup kitchen, it can take months before users commit to working in the garden.

Lucie says: "When they do begin to get involved, it turns the negative connotations of having to go to a soup kitchen on its head, users are responsible for contributing to something useful and beautiful, something they can feel proud of."

In a corner of the garden, quietly shelling peas, is Maria. From Poland, she explains in broken English that she was homeless for six years. Her boyfriend, who used to volunteer regularly at the garden with her, died three years ago.

"I love the garden," she smiles. "It is relaxing – it is very good for me."

Taking a break on a bench and wearing a badge that reads 'make tea not war' is Raymond Lazarus. Although he has a flat to go home to, he gets lonely. He says: "I like to stay busy, I like to feel useful."

Some of the volunteers are local residents, like Maartje Schalkx. Busily weeding some courgettes, she stops to wipe the mud from her hands and chat.

She has been coming here for about a year. She says: "I don't have any outdoor space of my own to work in and I just really enjoy meeting people in the community I might not get a chance to otherwise."

In another part of the church's grounds, Stoke Newington Farmers' Market is in full swing. Stevie, selling the Big Issue at its gates, will pop into the garden later to help. Shoppers on their way home weave through the beds, laden with coffees and carrier bags, pausing to admire the plants and chat with the volunteers.

Lucie says: "We've had several new people stop to enquire about helping out already this morning. The garden really does bring people together."

Right on cue, Kwame Appau appears to collect some mint for his market stall. He explains: "Our customers love fresh mint tea, so when we saw the kitchen garden volunteers were growing it here, we thought we could make tea with it, sell it on the stall, and give them the profits. It seemed a good idea to collaborate."

"It's all about the small things," Lucie adds. "We're not aiming for dramatic, life transformations, we want to make small but real differences. Lots of our users say that working here postpones the moment they take their next drink, because while they're here they forget about the urge. They get gentle exercise, eat fresh food from the ground, come out of isolation and start turning up on time."

Pupils from primary schools across Hackney took part in the fifth annual Bike Around the Borough mass cycle ride

Two wheels good, four wheels bad

Nearly 900 children, parents and staff took part in this year's Bike Around the Borough

CHILDREN on bicycles for as far as the eye could see greeted onlookers as the borough's fifth annual mass bike ride took to the roads in convoy.

Bike Around the Borough (BATB) saw hundreds of young cyclists from more than a third of the borough's schools complete a nine-mile circuit of Hackney.

The route took in many landmarks, including Hackney Downs, Hackney Empire, Hackney Town Hall, London Fields, Clissold Park, Stamford Hill, Lea Valley Walk and Hackney Marshes.

It was the second-largest ever 'bike bus' in the world, with 873 school children, staff and parents taking part. (A bike bus is where a group of cyclists ride together along a set route, picking up people as they go.) The current world record stands at 880, achieved by Banksia Beach State School,

Australia, last year.

The ride on 18 June provided a chance for students to practise skills learned at cycle training and to raise awareness of how easy it is to travel around the borough by bike. It was also an opportunity to train more school staff in cycle marshalling.

Robin O'Brien, 10, from

Queensbridge Primary School, E8, said: "It was exciting to be out on the streets with no cars. I love cycling because it's good exercise, it doesn't pollute and it's good for the world."

Rebecca Fouhy, nine, also from Queensbridge, added: "The ride was good because I learned how to cycle with more confidence on the road. I like cycling because it makes me feel free and it makes me feel happy."

The ride was greeted at the Marshes by a cycling samba rickshaw and live music from Five-O, a band

"I learned how to cycle with more confidence on the road. I like cycling because it makes me feel free"

Some 873 school children, staff and parents took part in this year's Bike Around the Borough cycling event

DID YOU KNOW?

Schoolchildren from across the borough helped form the second-largest 'bike bus' in the world – with 873 pupils, staff and parents – on 18 June made up of police officers.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: "Seeing so many Hackney students cycling in our streets en masse was a wonderful sight and I was delighted to see lots of residents out, cheering them on."

"As well as being a great day out, the event had some serious aims, including to increase and encourage future generations to cycle."

Sgt Pete Smith, from the Roads and Transport Policing Command, added: "It was such a great day and everybody enjoyed the exercise as well as the entertainment."

"We're all looking forward to an even bigger event next year."

Hackney aims to be the most cycle-friendly borough in London, with 15 per cent of residents travelling by bike for all journeys by 2025.

The borough, which has the highest cycling rate in London, has also been recognised nationally for its innovative approach to encouraging cycling with initiatives such as free training for children and adults; a cycle loan scheme; the introduction of a 20mph speed limit on all Council-controlled roads; the Cycle Hackney app; and cycle awareness training for HGV drivers.

The event was organised by the Council in partnership with the Met Police and sponsored by Volker Highways, Berkeley Homes, Union Developments and Cycle Training UK.

Getting to grips with Sugru

Jane Ni Dhulchaointigh developed and marketed Sugru – the world's first mouldable glue that turns into rubber – from her Hackney lab

By Hattie Worsley

It actually happened by accident," says Jane Ni Dhulchaointigh, talking about her sticky invention, Sugru.

Designed to attach to as many other materials as possible – aluminium, wood, glass and plastic – Sugru is the world's first mouldable glue. Take it out of its packet and it can be shaped for 30 minutes before hardening into a tough, waterproof, rubber-like substance.

In 2010, Time magazine named it one of the 50 best inventions of the year, at number 22. The iPad, meanwhile, was ranked at 34. But back in 2003, Jane was feeling less than confident about the future.

She says: "I'd arrived in London to study product design, full of ambition and enthusiasm. Then I realised I wasn't that good at it."

Hiding in a workshop at the Royal College of Art, in Kensington, she began playing with materials 'with no sense at all of what I was aiming for', she says. One day, she mixed some silicone sealant with dust from an extraction fan and 'when I came back from lunch, I threw it on the floor and it bounced. It seemed so odd, I'd made something that looked like wood, but bounced. I was fascinated'.

She started to use it in her own home, to fix the handle of a broken mug, then to enlarge the plug in her kitchen sink. She still couldn't think, however, how to turn it into a product with a single use.

Her boyfriend, James, advised her to let people decide what to do with it instead. A decade later, Sugru has made five million sales in over 160 countries worldwide and expanded into 10 colours. Oh, and Jane married James.

"The idea was the easy bit," she says. Adding: "Developing it took me far outside my comfort zone. I had to learn business skills, apply for patents,

“People are so clever and inventive at fixing things, it's just that they're often encouraged to think they can't” get investors, work with scientists and dig into my overdraft when the recession hit."

For six years she plugged away, developing the product. What kept her going was a wall of pictures in her office of people who believed in her product.

Jane explains: "Some of them would look at me as if I was crazy, but other times I would see people's eyes light up. I kept a list of these people and when we finally had samples to post to them, they would try it out and send me photos of the fixes they had made."

These inspiring photos numbered around 150 until 2009, when the company finally raised the £100,000 it needed to launch the product officially. Jane converted her Hackney lab into a little factory. She persuaded friends and family to work day and night, and shed blood, sweat and tears to get everything ready. Then she waited to see what response it got.

They didn't have to wait long. An online video of Sugru went viral, the first 1,000 packets sold out in six hours, and the number of photographs on Jane's wall exploded.

She says: "We started receiving hundreds of stories from Sugru users all over the world. People are so clever and inventive at fixing things, it's just that they're often encouraged to think that they can't."

"In the old days, you could get a new chair leg, or replace a screw if something you owned broke. Now, many things are made of moulded plastic and it's much harder. That's what Sugru is perfect for."

Jane's favourite fixes are the commonplace ones. The ones where 'parents keep a pair of scuffed school shoes going for a bit longer, or someone fixes the small broken part of the fridge that would otherwise have left the whole thing useless'.

Sometimes, she says, a little fix can make an enormous difference: "People send us photos showing how Sugru has helped them deal with disability, like making the knobs on a microwave tactile, so that a visually impaired person can use it."

A woman who was born without fingers also used the product to adapt her canoe paddle and travel 715km down the Yukon River in North America.

The Hackney factory now sends products out to large UK retailers, as well as to 5,000 stores across the US. Jane is still wedded to the borough though.

She says: "We employ about 50 people here, from the factory to the sales and marketing teams. It's such an amazing, creative community to be part of, you feel like people are really rooting for you."

 Hackney

Nearly £3.2million has been earmarked to transform and enhance one of Hackney's most cherished parks

Sprucing up Springfield

MORE than £3million has been earmarked to transform Springfield Park.

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and Big Lottery Fund announced the Council had been successful in the first round of bidding for money to improve the sweeping park in Upper Clapton.

The plans, developed in partnership with Springfield Park User Group, include refurbishing all of its buildings – which date back to the mid-19th century – upgrading footpaths, play equipment and gates, as well as helping to preserve and enhance the park's 14.7 hectare landscape.

“The park is well-admired but it is tired and needs these funds to bring it back to its former glory”

Ahead of the application, the Council talked to park users to outline the ambitious project and get their thoughts on what they would like to see done to improve the much-loved green space.

The two funds, which distribute money raised through the National Lottery, have pledged to give nearly £3.2million for these works, but require the Council to submit a second-round application to secure the money. Just over £180,000 has been awarded up front to help develop the bid.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “I'm determined to ensure Springfield Park fulfils its potential as one of the borough's great green spaces. The park is well-admired, but it is tired and needs these funds to bring it back to its former glory as well as improve upon it.”

HLF's Chair, Sir Peter Luff, said: “We all benefit from spending time outside in the fresh air, so it's vital that we look after our green spaces, particularly in dense urban areas.”

The Council has now got until June 2017 to develop its bid.

News in brief

Hackney's FoodCycle hub moves homes for the summer

SIX months after launching, a kitchen devoted to vulnerable people in Hackney is now serving free, three-course meals made from surplus food donated by supermarkets, to 30 people a week.

Run jointly by the charities Food Cycle and Outward, The Hackney Hub was launched in January and is open every Thursday lunchtime at New Kingshold Community Centre, E9.

After a healthy vegetarian meal, guests are also invited to take part in regular gardening sessions, games, health checks and film clubs.

Carly Attridge, deputy volunteering manager, said:

“We've had a brilliant response from volunteers and the people who come to eat with us. We're already looking at opening other hubs in Hackney and other boroughs too.”

The hub is temporarily relocating for the summer. From 23 July to 17 September, lunches will take place at the same time with the same services, but around the corner at Frampton Park Community Centre, Well St, E9 7QX.

Hackney installs the country's first on-street 'micro park' on Pitfield Street

LONDON'S first US-style 'parklet' has been created in redundant road space in Hackney, transforming it into a place for people to sit, hang out and relax.

The small urban park brings seating, cycle parking and a splash of nature to Pitfield Street, Shoreditch, along the route of the forthcoming Cycle

Superhighway 1.

It is based on a design first tested in San Francisco, and which has since been rolled out across other cities worldwide, and sees underused parking bays reclaimed for public leisure space.

The parklet occupies a 2.6m by 8m space in a former loading bay, and boasts bike stands and a decking area with benches and planters full of grasses and herbs. Solar-powered lighting has been installed.

If it proves popular, the Council has pledged to introduce more parklets across the borough.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: “The parklet allows people to read, eat, relax and secure their bikes.”

The parklet was funded using the Mayor's Air Quality Fund grant, through Sustrans' Innovation Fund, and by Cyclehoop.

Clap Hands

14-25 July, Hackney Showroom, 13 Amhurst Terrace, E8 2BT

SIBLING rivalry is pretty familiar territory to most people. But rivalry between a brother and sister who have been locked away in a basement for 15 years, with only each other, a record collection and a dodgy sample of books for company?

That's when things get more complicated, and it's the territory explored by theatre company pluck. in 'Clap Hands', a brand new show premiering at the Hackney Showroom.

It staged the popular 'The Cow Play' at the Rosemary Branch last November and is now back in the borough with this darkly-comic piece from up-and-coming playwright Aaron Hubbard.

Hilarious, disturbing and absurd in equal measure, it's not to be missed. Tickets cost £10.

THOSE of a nervous disposition might baulk at Abney Park's latest theatrical offering: an invitation to sell your soul, late at night, in a garden cemetery.

Telling the tale of a man who makes a pact with the devil in return for 24 years of power, this 90-minute promenade performance retells Marlowe's greatest play in the stunning, and spooky, surroundings of the park.

As the light fades over the grave stones:

"The stars move still, time runs, the clock will strike, The devil will come, and Faustus must be damned."

'Doctor Faustus' is on from 15 July to 2 August, at 7.30pm, in Abney Park.

A Land Without People

9 July-1 August, Courtyard Theatre, 40 Pitfield St, N1 6EU

AS the world marks 70 years since the end of World War Two and the liberation of Nazi death camps, the Courtyard Theatre premieres a new play by writer Brian Rotman.

'A Land Without People' is set in the years and months proceeding May 1948 and the establishment of the State of Israel. In the aftermath of the war, and amid horror at the fate of European Jews, politicians in London are wrangling over the prospect of a United Nations partition of Palestine into Jewish and Arab territories.

Rotman has pieced together his story through meticulous research and examination of contemporary documents. Five actors play 17 historic figures, sometimes repeating lines discovered from real documents and letters. History brought to life, then.

Carnegie prize winner hands out awards to Hackney pupils

AWARD-winning author Tanya Landman put pupils through their paces at an annual competition that celebrates children's literature.

Ten local schools took part in the Carnegie competition, which is inspired by one of the most prestigious awards for children's literature. Tanya was one of the judges at the event, and days later she was announced as the winner of the Carnegie Prize, for her book 'Buffalo Soldier'.

A group from each school presented their thoughts on one of the shortlisted books, using a range of visual art, drama, dance and music, at Petchey Academy, on 18 June.

Students from Cardinal Pole Catholic School, in E9, delivered a moving presentation on Elizabeth Laird's book, 'The Fastest Boy In The World' to win.

The panel of judges were impressed by the students' original interpretation of the book and also the use of moving image and powerful dramatisations of key scenes. Tanya said: "This was a brilliant event. The students were so enthusiastic, full of energy and imagination. I loved it."

The panel of judges also included staff from Hackney Learning Trust and Jo de Guia, owner of Victoria Park Books, who arranged for the author to visit Hackney.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, added: "Our Carnegie competition is a great way of bringing these exciting new books to life."

said: "Sometimes a young person is not successful in one school, but can thrive in a different environment.

The college will never give up on a child, whatever challenges they may present.

"Our students have made huge progress this year and we wanted to celebrate this with their parents."

Guests at the event on 11 June also viewed students' artwork in an exhibition and listened to a performance of African drumming.

Shane Foley, Head of School, said: "It was wonderful to see so many smiling faces. We are proud of all of the children here and we are helping them to become better learners and enjoy the success this can then bring."

The awards ceremony was supported by The Vintners' Company.

Call-out for Hackney primary pupils to imagine the future of the borough

Residents' photographs are on display at Hackney Museum

PRIMARY schools in Hackney are being invited to take part in a competition to create a model of what they think housing in the borough will look like in the future.

The project forms part of a programme of activities to mark Hackney's 50th year as a borough, which encourages residents to share memories of the area and to help shape its future.

The winning school, with the most innovative and creative 3D model of future housing, will receive £500. Two runners up will receive £150 each.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "We hope that lots of primary schools and children get involved in this exciting project and we are looking forward to seeing their imaginative creations."

Staff from a local architectural firm will join the judging panel and the winners will be announced in September. Schools will need to complete an entry form to take part and submit their models to Hackney Homes before 17 July.

A collection of personal photographs, supplied by residents from 1965 to the present day, is currently on display at Hackney Museum until 29 August as part of the 'Hackney@50 – the People's Choice' exhibition.

WINNER of 'The Voice', Jermain Jackman, joined young residents on Nisbet House Estate, for the opening of a new games area.

The Pattball court in Homerton is the fifth one to be installed in Hackney. The fast-paced game involves two opponents hitting a ball against a wall with the aim of winning points by making unreturnable shots.

Moynul Ahmed, founder of the Pattball company, said: "I am from Hackney so I wanted the story to start here."

"The whole concept and format of Pattball is brilliant. The rules are simple, so it's really easy to get used to"

I wanted to develop this simple yet effective game to encourage more people to play. Having a dedicated court makes it more appealing and competitive. Once we get people playing on the same format we can hold tournaments."

Jermain added: "It's great to be part of the Pattball launch event. We need to invest in sports in our community like this."

Nathan, 16, who tried the game out for the first time, said: "The whole concept and format of Pattball is brilliant. The rules are simple, so it's really easy to get used to. I am now looking forward to a tournament."

The five Pattball courts in Hackney are at Petchey Academy, E8; The Urswick School, E9; Millfields Community School, E5; Morningside Primary School, E9 and Nisbet House Estate, E9.

Cllr Sade Etti, Speaker of Hackney, who also attended the opening event on 14 June, said: "It was wonderful to see so many young people take part in today's event."

More success for Hackney at the London Youth Games

By Dila Tumer

HACKNEY has been celebrating more success at this year's Balfour Beatty London Youth Games.

The borough's para-athletes secured bronze in both the male and female competitions on 17 June at Lee Valley Athletics Centre. Individuals took home gold medals in both the female long jump and 100 metres, plus the male shot-put.

Lynn Humphrey, team manager, said: "We are over the moon as a lot of work has gone in to these athletes at our Para Athletics Club, and it is also good to see the coach and teachers seeing the rewards of their hard work and effort."

Other teams also enjoyed success last month, winning bronze in the male judo competition, with individual golds from Nikita Petrak, Cameron Standell, Arlow Ross and Arnold Harrison. Calvin Walker-Hall, team manager, said: "I'm really, really proud of the team. We saw some outstanding performances."

Hackney also took silver in the under-16 female water polo event at Crystal Palace Sports Centre.

Meanwhile, the borough's sailing team claimed seventh place out of 33 at the London Youth Games regatta on 20 and 21 June.

The London Youth Games finish on 5 July and Hackney stood 4th overall, out of 33, at the time of going to press.

Jace Joseph successfully pitched for a mobile bike repair business

Young entrepreneurs secure £1k for business ideas

THREE young Hackney entrepreneurs have secured business packages worth a total of £1,000 in a 'Dragons Den' style pitching event.

The Enterprize project, organised by Hackney Homes and Sanctuary Housing, encouraged 13 to 25-year-olds to develop business ideas that benefit the community.

Jace Joseph, 24, came first, captivating judges with his pitch for a mobile bike repair business and winning £500. His idea, called JJ Cycles, is a roadside call-out service for cyclists. He also has plans to educate other young people with cycle repair workshops in schools and youth centres.

Jace said: "I found the presentation very daunting and was nervous pitching my idea."

The runners-up were Hannah Akinbode, 25, and Chloe Robinson, 24, who also impressed with their detailed plans and won £250 each.

Hannah pitched an educational games package to test children's knowledge and cultural awareness. While Chloe talked of inspiring young people from black and minority ethnic communities to chase their long term goals through workshops and mentoring.

Each candidate will receive a tailored support package aimed at helping them turn their business idea into a reality.

Early years providers awarded certificates by Children's Food Trust for their achievements in promoting healthier food in nurseries

Eat better, start better

AN extra 2,200 under-fives are set to benefit from a better diet after the successful roll-out of healthy food and drink guidelines for early years services in Hackney.

Over the last year, a total of 48 nurseries and children's centres and 14 child-minders have implemented the Children's Food Trust's (CFT) national 'Eat Better Start Better' voluntary food and drink guidelines.

These participating centres received initial training from the healthy eating charity, with ongoing support from the

“This commitment is going to be of real benefit to Hackney's children and families”

Hackney Learning Trust and Homerton hospital.

The CFT guidelines help early years centres to deliver high standards of nutrition in the food and drink they serve to one to five-year-olds. Implementing the guidelines involved a thorough review of each centre's food policy.

Recommendations included increasing the amount and variety of fruit and vegetables on the menu; increasing the variety of protein and iron rich foods, particularly in vegetarian dishes; and reducing the sugar, fat and salt content in meals and snacks.

The 62 early years providers which committed to implementing the guidelines were awarded certificates by Zaya Fullerton, from CFT, at an event on 25 June at Hackney Town Hall, to celebrate their achievements and share good practice.

The pilot project was funded and coordinated through the 'Get Hackney Healthy' initiative, set up last year by the Council to tackle child obesity.

Cllr Antoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children and Young People, said: "This commitment is going to be of real benefit to Hackney's children and families by providing the highest quality food and drink and supporting families to adopt healthy eating practices."

Success for Wellbeing Games

MENTAL and community health users and their carers were treated to a day of sports activities and events in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park at the annual Wellbeing Games.

Designed to bring people together through sport and raise awareness of the importance of physical health, the games included taster sessions in yoga, boxing, zumba, football, swimming and badminton.

Held at the Copperbox Arena, the games attracted patients and carers from Tower Hamlets, Hackney and Newham.

Sarah, from Hackney, said: "I know that physical health is as important as my mental wellbeing. Today, I got the opportunity to try out different activities and get on the road to improving my physical health."

Become a healthy start mentor

TWO health charities are recruiting Hackney volunteers to help launch an innovative new programme to tackle childhood obesity.

'Healthy Families: Right from the Start' is run by HENRY (Health Exercise Nutrition for the Really Young) and Family Lives to build parents' knowledge, skills and confidence in key elements of healthy living such as emotional well-being, healthy eating patterns and physical activity.

The charities are seeking volunteers to commit to working directly with families, with children under the age of five, for at least three hours per week over two months. The programme takes place over eight weeks.

Volunteers will receive five days' training and an information pack to become Healthy Start Mentors.

The Council pledges to do more to protect girls at risk of female genital mutilation

MORE than 3,000 young women in Hackney are thought to be at risk of female genital mutilation.

Although the Council is helping lead the way in protecting these girls, more work needs to be done, according to a report by its Children and Young People's Scrutiny Commission.

Female genital mutilation (FGM) – the partial or total removal of the external genitalia – has been illegal in the UK since 1986, but it has only recently entered the national spotlight following a number of high-profile campaigns.

The practice, carried out by some African, Middle Eastern and

Asian communities, causes significant health problems, ranging from severe pain, emotional and psychological shock, to chronic infection, damage to the reproductive system, complications in sex, pregnancy and childbirth, and death.

The commission talked to FGM survivors and campaigners during a one-day investigation, in February, and heard how the Council has been working with campaigners, clinicians, schools and police since last July to develop a joint action plan around prevention, protection and support.

Under a new plan, IT systems are being designed to record all cases of FGM; at-risk communities are being talked to; money is being invested in a consortium of local voluntary groups; and FGM is included in personal, social and health education classes in some schools.

In Hackney, around 245 women have been identified by Homerton hospital as having suffered FGM since 2008. For more info, visit: hawatrust.org.uk

TODAY, health and safety in the workplace is a priority for employers, but this was not the case in the 19th century when factory workers had no quick and easy access to a doctor. Death or serious disability resulting from workplace accidents were common.

In 1877, the Order of St John of Jerusalem, an international order of chivalry with the mission 'to prevent and relieve sickness and injury, and to act to enhance the health and well-being of people anywhere in the world', set up the first St John Ambulance associations, in order to train workers in first aid and life-saving skills, especially those employed on railways and in the mining industry.

An early member of the Haggerston Division, Metropolitan Corps, was Henry Dunn Sayer (1857-1911) of Andrews Road, which runs alongside the north bank of the Regent's Canal. It could be a dangerous place at a time when few knew how to swim, with people falling in from boats or the towpath, swimmers getting into difficulty, or those attempting suicide.

From an early age Henry took it upon himself to brave the waters to rescue drowning people. By the time he was 38, Henry had already saved 65 people from the canal.

His friends and fellow St John comrades decided that his work should be acknowledged and so on the evening of 3 December 1895, a testimonial grand concert was held in his honour at Shoreditch Town Hall.

“The last occasion on which he risked his life for another was when, lying on a sick-bed”

Some 40 acts appeared on the programme, including George English of Sebright Music Hall, in Bethnal Green, who recited a poem dedicated to Henry written by F V St Clair; as well as an appearance by Charles Chaplin, the music hall artiste and father of actor Charlie Chaplin.

A report on the event noted Henry's dedication even when he himself was ill. It stated: “The last occasion on which he risked his life for another was when, lying on a sick-bed, he was told that a woman had jumped into the Regent's Canal. Without a moment's hesitation, and in spite of his illness, he struggled to the spot, pushed aside the onlookers, plunged into the water and rescued the would-be suicide.”

Sadly, it seems that

Henry's dedication to the cause resulted in his own early death in 1911, aged just 54. At the inquest, Henry's tearful wife Eliza explained that he had been working at his occupation as a furniture dealer until an hour before he died. He came home gasping for breath and vomiting blood, and died shortly afterwards. It was said that he would frequently attempt artificial respiration upon those he had rescued, and it was felt that his health had been badly damaged through his heroic actions.

By the time he died, Henry had saved 113 lives and been awarded a Queen Victoria medal and four medals for bravery from the Royal Humane Society, which promoted resuscitation and life-saving skills.

His story came to light recently when his great, great grandson, Adrian Werner, joined the St John Ambulance Services team in the East region, where he works as an Emergency Transport Attendant.

St John Ambulance volunteers continue to save lives on a regular basis. Their mission is to get everyone learning first aid so they have the skills needed to save a life.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Asparagus risotto

Serves 4

Preparation time

Cooking time
1 hour 30 mins

THE key to making risotto is to prepare your ingredients in advance, as you'll need to keep stirring as it cooks. You can easily make your own vegetable stock (see below), which will taste better – and have less salt in – than shop bought stuff.

Ingredients

- 300g asparagus
- 1.2 ltr good vegetable stock (see below)
- 1 medium onion
- 1 garlic clove
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 400g Arborio rice
- 150ml white wine
- 20g butter
- 2 lemons, juice and zest
- 50g Parmesan cheese
- Rocket for garnish.

Vegetable stock

- 1 stick of celery, cut in half and split lengthways
- 2 small carrots, split in half lengthways
- 2 small onions, sliced
- 2 bay leaves
- 12 black peppercorns
- Handful of porcini mushrooms
- Pinch of salt.

Method

- To make the stock, roughly chop the onions, carrots and celery, place in a pan and cover with water. Add a bay leaf, a small handful of black peppercorns and ideally a few dried porcini mushrooms. Bring to the boil and simmer for an hour. Strain the liquid into a bowl and leave aside
- To grill the asparagus, steam over boiling water for five minutes, then drizzle with olive oil and brown lightly under the grill. Cut the stalks into bite-sized pieces and set aside
- Finely chop the onion and garlic. In another large saucepan, heat up the oil and cook the onion and garlic gently until golden. Stir frequently
- Turn up the heat to medium, add the rice and stir. Add the white wine and stir till it has been absorbed
- Add the stock little by little. It should take around 18 minutes to cook the rice. Remember to stir constantly as you add the stock
- When all the stock has been added, remove the pan from the heat and add the pre-grilled asparagus, butter, lemon juice and zest and the parmesan. Stir well. Let the risotto sit for a couple of minutes, season to taste with salt and pepper and serve with rocket on top.

This recipe comes from Hackney City Farm. An essential stop on a Hackney farmyard visit is the excellent Frizzante cafe, which serves French, Italian and British food during the day and on a couple of evenings in the week.

Reminder to have your say on the Council's licencing policy

THERE is still time to have your say on proposals that aim to manage the growth of Hackney's night-time economy while balancing the needs of the people who live here.

The Council wants residents and businesses to give their views on a proposed extension to the Shoreditch Special Policy Area (SPA) south to the borough boundaries with the City, Islington and Tower Hamlets, and west to Old Street roundabout, along the southern part of City Road.

The policy proposes a considered approach for the granting of licence applications to try to ensure that anti-social behaviour doesn't increase in the area.

Other proposals being consulted upon include a borough-wide policy with different opening hours for town centres and residential areas; the relaxation of the Dalston SPA; and new hours for restaurants, theatres and cinemas in town centres.

The proposals will only affect applications for new licences, or variations of existing licences. It would not stop new licenses from being granted, but it would enable the Council to manage the growth of entertainment and hospitality premises to ensure they do not have an adverse effect on the surrounding area.

To have your say, or for more info, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/licensing; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk by 5pm on 23 August.
